News of the Morning.

The House of Representatives have re committed the Fox River Rail Road Bill, which renders its passage doubtful. Gen. WILSON has been elected U. S. Senator by the Massachusetts House, and the House of the Senate will concur. The great storm of last week seems to have swept over the whole North and half of the Union. It was as severe on the Atlantic coast as here. The New York Market of yesterday shows a slight improvement.

Of domestic news the most important is the passage of the Kossuth, Booth and Rynegart fine remitting reimbursement for aiding in the rescue of a fugitive slave. We have nothing new from Madison as to Senator. Our Madison letter makes some startling developements as to the cost of the Insane Asylum. The fate of the missing Dr. Lucius Clark, is still wrapped in mystery. We have no news of his return.

JUDGE PAINE'S BYRON PAINE.—We commence to-day, and shall conclude in two more issues, the publication of Mr. BYRON PAINE'S masterly argument in the U. S. Court. It is a noble effort, worthy of every man's attentive study.

THE TRAINS.—THE MAILS.—The morning train from the West, on the M. & M. Rail Road, due here at noon, got in about 2 P. M. yesterday, and the evening train at 10 P. M. The Eastern Mail, the evening before last and way mail, due here at o'clock last Monday, got in about 6½ o'clock last morning. The snow lies in deep drifts in many parts of the road, but a day or two will break the track.

The End of the Rescue Trials.

BOOTH AND RYECRAFT FINED AND IMPRISONED.

In the U. S. Court, yesterday morning, Judge MILLER denied the motion made by the counsel for Sherman M. Booth, for a new trial and in arrest of judgment, and immediately thereafter pronounced the sentence upon Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft who have both been convicted of rescuing, to wit: a violation of the Fugitive Slave Act, in assisting in the rescue of the fugitive slave, GLOVER. The Judge sentenced Mr. Booth to be imprisoned for the term of ONE MONTH in the jail of Milwaukee County, or such other prisons or places as the Marshal or the Judge thereof may from time to time direct, and that he pay a fine of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS, and the costs of prosecution to be taxed, and that he be and remain in custody until the sentence be complied with. Mr. RYECRAFT was sentenced to TEN DAYS' imprisonment in the Milwaukee County Jail, a fine of TWO HUNDRED dollars, and no costs, and to remain in custody till the fine is paid.—Immediately after the sentence, the U. S. Marshal, RUSSELL E. HEMAN, conducted Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft in due form to the Milwaukee County Jail and delivered them into the custody of the Sheriff.—They will doubtless remain in his keeping during the time prescribed by Judge MILLER.

Imprisonment for such a cause entails no disgrace. The offence whereof Messrs. BOOTH and RYECRAFT stand convicted—that of aiding a fellow-being to regain his freedom—was one in which hundreds of their fellow-citizens participated, and thousands sympathized. The law which they violated is a mockery of human justice, and a stigma to American legislation, and a foul blot upon the escutcheon of the Republic.—They, therefore, Messrs. BOOTH and RYECRAFT shall have completed their brief term of imprisonment and returned to their usual avocations, they will be cheered and greeted by their fellow-citizens as martyrs who have suffered and endured for conscience' sake, and been made the victims of a servile, unconstitutional and inhuman law.

But something more than sympathy is due to Messrs. BOOTH and RYECRAFT from those, at least, of their fellow-men, who think as they do of the infamous Fugitive Slave Act. The fine imposed upon Mr. RYECRAFT is $200; that inflicted upon Mr. BOOTH is $1000, and "costs of prosecution" are to be taxed," which will pretty surely be $500 or $1000 more, and until these fines are paid they are to remain in prison. Neither of the prisoners can well afford to pay these heavy fines. Nor should they be asked or allowed to do so. Let the People of Wisconsin contribute the means to satisfy these penalties. Let every man who loves Freedom and loathes the Fugitive Slave Act, cast his mite into this fund. And let steps be taken at once to organize a committee to receive, acknowledge and apply the monies thus raised.

We understand that a public meeting for this purpose will be held on Thursday or Friday evening next, of which due notice will be given. We hope that it will be most numerously attended, and that its action will be prompt, decided and effective with success.

From Madison.

Madison, Jan. 20.

The relief from work afforded by the adjournment till Monday is very grateful to those of us whose labors are more arduous than those of the members; and long walks here and there about the town and neighborhood have enabled a good many to get a larger share than usual, of fresh, pure air, and to see something more than a circle of the improvements in progress. A census of the inhabitants is being taken, and is nearly completed, and Muldoon is "Esquire" says it, the figures are nearly 6,000 already, and "about fifty families not yet taken." The Speaker's place in Madison is very great, as was manifested two or three years ago in the getting up of the Legislative Ball to prevent the removal of the capitol from here; and the town does not look as if it would hold 7000 people properly—but then it will not do to go behind the figures, for they "don't lie."—Madison then, being granted accurate, exhibits a wonderfully rapid growth, even for our wonderfully growing State. And this growth is not, in some places, a mere jotting down on the streets and in the alleys, of cheap, clumsy boxes with shingles, but is highly creditable to the taste of the people, and indicative of a comfortable state of temporal affairs. Even within the village proper, which affords a great many sites for residences everywhere overlooking the lake, and with a range of prospect of lake and bluffs, and groves of timber, and open prairie, unequalled in the country, and which notes are crowned with pleasant cottages—the region round about, and the whole front of the lakes, are being filled up and occupied by farms, small and large, taken up by men of all means," for practical and ornamental farming. Much to be envied are the sick people who shall be advised by wise physicians to resort to the Water Cure Establishment, now beginning to rear its walls, beyond Lake Monona, for aid. If the water treatment does not cure them—and I am no believer in the efficacy of curing all the ills that flesh is heir to by wrapping, or plunging, or sitting in, or pouring upon of cold water—fresh air, plenty of exercise, cessation from business, and the pleasures of boating, fishing, &c., &c., will cure, pretty certainly. So, success to the enterprise!

To come back from wanderings about town to the town itself, I have already noticed the improved condition of the United States and American Hotels—the Capital House being always A No. 1. The handsome and expensive stone blocks of buildings are fully occupied from basement to attic, with stores and offices, returning ample rents. New churches are completed and in use, though the Congregations do not seem to increase with like proportion as the accommodations. The stocks of goods in many of the stores are large and costly, showing the calls upon the merchants made by a luxurious population; and, in this connection, one item is noticeable, to wit: the jewelry establishment of Roth, under the Capital House. Money must be very easily earned here in Madison, or else the jeweller has a Barnum-like trust in printing ink, and sees his interest in it. The Madison papers are full of his advertisements, and regularly, by special invitation to each, the members are invited to call and buy themselves rich. This is probably the secret of the large sales made from the handsome stock of this enterprising genius. Durrie's bookstore is also an "institution" of which the Madison people have reason to be proud, Atwaters & Langrishe's Theatre is in full blast,—the billiard saloons light up the streets nightly. The stores of potables which passed through Milwaukee for this place last fall would have astonished any one who did not appreciate its capacity for such things in the winter; and in corners and darkened rooms—darkened to outsiders—the wild beasts—Tigers and otherwise—are nightly munching their victims. The lobby is very large, for some reason unknown, since the question of U. S. Senator cannot bring them all here. Each of the candidates, however, has a numerous retinue, some of whom are supposed to be peculiarly fitted to operate upon some peculiar class of members. It all brings grist to somebody's mill, but at the special request of two or three democratic members, I promised to hint to the candidates that very little has yet been done in the way of oysters, and they are entirely willing to take the risk of disease in the bivalves—indeed they assert that the theory of bivalvular disease is a humbug, especially circulated just now by the candidates, to save the ir pockets. It is a bad state of things, truly.

The Senate yesterday afternoon transacted an interesting piece of business before adjourning over to Monday afternoon. Mr. McGarry had introduced a resolution of instructions to our Congressmen to oppose the alteration of the Naturalization laws, intended, as was said, to "smoke out Sam." The resolution came up in the afternoon, and our friend McGarry squared himself for a fight, standing, like the Disinherited Knight of Ivanhoe, ready for all comers. He briefly expressed his approbation of the bill, and waited for the opposition, but none made its appearance. The resolution was read, and McG. called for the ayes and noes, and Senator Adams led off with an "Aye," and it was "Aye" all the way down the list, and so Sam was not "smoked out"—not being about the premises, probably.

A shabby looking pamphlet was distributed yesterday upon the desks of members, containing the 'Argument of Charles James Esq., counsel on the part of the State of Wisconsin, and the opinion of Caleb Cushing, Attorney General of the U. S.' in the matter of the application of Gov. Barstow for the 5 per cent fund, in May last.—Can anybody tell what we have an Attorney General for in this State, and why it is that when anything is to be done, some other counsel has to be employed?

It is readily granted that if other counsel must be employed, Mr. James had the best claim on record, not only as being one of the original Forty, and a man "who went to school with Frank Pierce," but as being the only one of a fortunate legal connection, who had not yet been fairly provided for. Fillmore, Hall and Haven used to be thought a lucky firm; but the connection which under various names has embraced Messrs. Coon, James, Hunter & Mariner, is as remarkable. The first has been Attorney General, and used the Canal Land mortgages, and somehow or other got through Appropriation bill No. 152 last winter, without the aid of the Assembly. The second has now had a slice of $600,00,or a good share of it, that being charged to the expense of this "Argument" from the Governor's contingent fund. The third, who is a State Senator, was appointed by the Governor to the office of Private Secretary, established last year, and our friend Marriner had the making of the Canal Land abstracts, a job of some $800, or thereabouts. So the world goes.

But I am keeping you from the pamphlet.

Mr. James occupies 12¾ pages in arguing that Uncle Sam has no right to withhold the 5 per cent from Wisconsin. A portion of the argument seems legitimate, but no one who cares for the honor of the state will thank the counsel for pleading infancy as a bar to the supposed debt to the United States, as is done by claiming that the State cannot be held responsible for territorial misdoings. The counsel astonishes Mr. Cushing with an unreasonable display of Latin—characterizing the territorial condition as one which "is a part of Congress infinitely less than an imperium in imperio," and as "a monus ho-pus among responsible parties."

Caleb don't care for that, and he occupies the remaining 18 pages of the pamphlet with his opinion. After reviewing the history of the whole matter, and reciting the facts that an equivalent for sold and unsold lands 138,996 acres of the Canal Grant were at first withheld from the 500,000 acres granted to the State, but that afterwards the General Land Office consented to allow this State to select the whole of the 500,000 acres; but, at the same time, set off the value of the first named tract at $2,50 per acre, or $313,579 as a debt of this State to be paid to Uncle Sam in the lapse of years out of the 5 per cent fund. This last was the arrangement made by Judge D. H. Brown, for which he received $1,000. Caleb Cushing maintains that this arrangement is all valid, and so the commissioners of school lands have selected and are selling at $2,25 per acre these lands which cost the State $2,50 per acre. Besides, Caleb calls this arrangement a "sguntiagamatic contract" between Uncle Sam and this State, which settles the question.

I neglected the other day to say anything of a very interesting lecture by Prof. Daniels, entitled "Geology and Theology." The Professor is certainly a very enthusiastic and eloquent lecturer, and his expositions of his favorite science are plain and practical. I wish that our citizens could have an opportunity of listening to his course.

By the by, have you seen the abstract of the contract made by the Insane Commissioners, and the estimate of the probable cost of the building. Just turn the figures in various lights and shades and hold them up to the view of the people. A HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS for a Lunatic Asylum in this year of grace in Wisconsin! How do the people take it? And that is not all, for the estimate being $150,000, the actual cost would be nearer $200,000. And the Commissioners think they can get along this year with an appropriation of $52,000! I doubt if they get it. Certainly they will not get it, if there be any way of avoiding the contract, and it is trusted that, inasmuch as there are old stones afloat concerning the bids, the State may get out of the difficulty, in which these Commissioners have unwisely, to say nothing worse, placed it. No person who is so unfortunate as to require a State Asylum for a home is half so insane as these officers, who have, under a law designed by those who passed it, if not by those who drew it, only to provide for making preparations for a benevolent enterprise, leaving future legislators to decide upon its extent and rate of progress. It may be that the tax payers of Wisconsin are in for it, but it is to be hoped not.

W. H. W.

SPEECH OF BYRON PAINE,

May it please the Court, and
Gentlemen of the Jury:

The events of the past are very frequently and very properly used to illustrate the events of the present. And therefore, in accordance with a custom with which we are all familiar, I will read a short account of a rescue that took place two thousand years ago, as a fit text for you and me to contemplate in discharging our respective duties in this case.

ACTS—CHAPTER 12—1—Now about that time, Herod the king, stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

And he killed James the brother of John with the sword.

And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. Then were the days of unleavened bread.

And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing out of the church unto God for him.

And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

And behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

And he went out and followed him, and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

When they past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened of his own accord: and they went out and passed on through one street: and forthwith the angel departed from him.

We have now, Gentlemen of the Jury, fallen upon times when men are indicted for imitating the Angels of God. And though to be convicted on such an indictment would be an honor to any man, and an inheritance of honor to his children; yet that might not repay him for months of weary languishing in prison, shut out from the light and air of heaven, to return, perhaps, with a broken constitution, to a business scattered and destroyed, and a family left destitute, it may be, to pay the penalty of too strong a love of liberty in the bosom of the husband and father. And therefore,—not to avoid infamy, for that it is beyond the power of your verdict to fasten on the defendant, but if possible to avoid suffering, to avoid injustice and oppression, we stand before you in his behalf to convince you that he has done nothing worthy of punishment at your hands—that he is guilty of no violation of the laws of the land.

The Head of the United States,—by which I mean the Slave Power,—having control of the Government, stretched forth its hand, to vex certain of the poorest and most helpless of the people. I mean that portion who having been born to the bondman's doom, and grown to manhood or to womanhood with as little care or culture as the beasts that perish, had nevertheless in obedience to that divine instinct planted in every human soul, which tells it that it is free, escaped from their thraldom and tasted for a time of the sweets of liberty. It was decreed that they should be taken back to their chains, and to accomplish this, the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850 was passed.

On the evening of the tenth of March last, a man named Joshua Glover, living a few miles from the city of Racine, was arrested by Deputy Marshal Cotton by virtue of a warrant issued under this act. He was arrested in the night.—Under the cover of darkness, the deputy marshal and his assistants came upon the little cabin of that unfortunate man. He was unarmed—they were armed. And yet with that violence which seems to be so inseparable from the execution of this law that its record has been written in the blood of its victims, it was found necessary that he should be wounded before he was taken into custody. Then during the silence of the night—that time when sleep falls upon the folds of poorfal man, and guilt and crime are skulking abroad to do those deeds that shun the light—they pursued their way to this city, and at early dawn they cast their prisoner cold, terrified, bruised and bleeding into the jail of this County. The deed was done. The process—hard process though it was—was served. The prisoner was in prison.

But, gentlemen! liberty has many tongues; and tongues that are not to be silenced when deeds like those are done. No! It is in vain to attempt it.

> You may as well forbid the mountain pines
> To wag their high tops and to make no noise,
> When they are fretted by the gusts of heaven,

as to forbid the tongues of liberty to wag in its behalf when it is endangered either by lawless, or by lawful violence.

The news of this arrest spread like wild-fire among the generous freemen of Racine. It was sent there upon the lightning's track, and when it left that track, it spread with scarcely less swiftness, along the electric cords that bind all human hearts together in that great bond which lies at the foundation of the christian's love, and which democracy has embodied in civil government, the bond of human brother-hood.

The artizan left his shop, the lawyer his office, the priest his study and the merchant his counter, and men met together on the streets, and talked of this matter with astonishment and alarm. Was there anything strange or unnatural in this? On the contrary, would it not have been most strange and unnatural had it been otherwise? Would it not have been a most damning fact against this people if they could have seen the liberty of a fellow man stricken down and destroyed, with a cold and heartless indifference? No, Gentlemen! such is not human nature.

> —If damned custom have not brazed it so,
> That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Such is not even the nature of the brute. For when the butcher has spilt the blood of his victim on the earth, and its fellows come near the spot, they rush together with wild looks and wild bellowings, that testify their anxiety for the fate of their murdered comrade.—And as man is elevated above the beasts, so in his soul does the quality of sympathy glow with a brightness and warmth that give to the paths of this rough world the purest and sweetest pleasure they possess.

We all remember poor Avery, who, by some disastrous chance, was burned to the brink of Niagara, where he clung for a time to the rocks with all that tenacity with which men strive for life. His situation became known, and it was telegraphed in all directions. And while thousands were gathering to the spot from neighboring places, to do what mortal power could do to save him, thousands upon thousands more all through the land, were awaiting in anxious and painful suspense, the fate of the unfortunate man. And when at last, finding himself beyond the reach of human aid, worn out by his struggle with the mighty element, he sprang up with a cry of wild despair, and went down into the boiling and thundering abyss, a throb of anguish was felt by the hearts of the whole people.

Such facts are honorable to human nature, and it was the same feeling that was manifested in the case of Glover. He, too, was on a precipice more fearful than Niagara. A precipice at the bottom of which lay, not the brief agonies of death, but the years of wasting sorrow for himself and his children after him, from which both he and they would lie down beneath the clods of the valley, as a peaceful and pleasant refuge.

I say, therefore, that it was a fact honorable to the people of this city and Racine, that they felt and manifested a strong interest in the fate of Joshua Glover, whom seized by those who wished to deprive him of his liberty, that best gift of God to man, without which life itself is nothing.

A writ of habeas corpus was issued in his favor. The Court did not allow us to give the writ in evidence, but there is sufficient before you to show that a writ was issued, and that it was delivered to Sheriff Page. The people waited for sometime, hoping that the great writ of liberty would be obeyed and that Glover's right to freedom could be determined, and protected by that great safeguard of the rights of us all. But when it was found that Glover was to be brought before the Judge of this Court for examination, without any regard to the writ that had been issued in his favor, the excitement became intense and the people assembled in great numbers at the Court House Square. A meeting was organized. Speeches were made expressive of the sentiments of the speakers, and resolutions adopted expressive of the sentiments of the meeting. In the meantime the day wore on and yet nothing was heard from the writ of habeas corpus. The people began to get more and more alarmed. They began to think the boasted writ of liberty, no better than blank paper. They appointed various committees to see that Glover was not smuggled away, and to learn what was to be done with the writ. All day they labored, earnestly yet mildly, to secure such protection as the laws could give to the poor trembling fugitive.—But at last it was announced to the crowd, by a committee, who had waited on Judge Miller, that the writ would not be obeyed by the Deputy Marshal.

Some remarks were made by one or two individuals, and as the meeting was about to disperse, some spirits among them, impatient at the delay—indignant at what they believed to be a disregard of the law and power of the State, rushed for the jail, and did for Glover what the Angel of the Lord did for Peter. They broke open the prison door—they bore him forth—they placed him on a wagon and hurried him away while a shout for freedom that shook the heavens went up from that vast multitude,—a shout that startled tyranny in its dreams of power—a shout whose echoes are still ringing like a triumphal song of liberty chanted by the mighty voice of the people. The proceeding caused no alarm. On the contrary, as the vast mass swept by in the track of the flying fugitive, women and children who flee from evil stood in the doors of their houses and clapped their hands for joy.

It is for aiding in this escape that the defendant is indicted. There is no proof that he took any part, or aided in the breaking of the jail.—But he is sought to be charged with crime, because he exercised the privilege of an American freeman, to attend a public meeting and to express his opinion of public acts; and because he took an active part to obtain legal relief for a fellow-being whose liberty he believed to be endangered. It is this that gives this case its most transcendant interest, before which the mere personal interest of the defendant dwindles into insignificance. For it is this that presents it in the light of a war upon the freedom of speech—a war upon the right of the people to assemble and express their sentiments upon any and all subjects of public concern, and to take measures to avail themselves of the remedies furnished by the laws. And when this issue is forced upon us we shall meet it without shrinking. His enemies have in derision called this defendant the Mar yr Booth. There may be more truth in their words than they thought. The true of liberty is watered by the blood of martyrs. And let me tell you that if he is to suffer for exercising the rights of an American citizen, his place will be filled by martyrs whose name is legion, who will maintain those rights at all hazards, untrivided by fines or imprisonment, or even death itself.

But, gentlemen, before proceeding to the examination of the evidence in this case, let us pause for a little time, to settle clearly in our minds the function which the laws assign to each of us in the drama we are now performing. On the one side is the government of the United States charging crime upon the defendant, and appearing here by the Dist. Atty and assistant counsel whose duty it is to labor for conviction. On the other side is the defendant, asserting his innocence, appearing here by us, his counsel, whose legal duty and constitutional right it is, to urge in his behalf whatever may make that innocence appear. His Honor has to preside over and direct the trial according to law, and to instruct the jury as to the law applicable to the case. But upon you, gentlemen, devolves the highest and most responsible function of all. It is for you and each one of you to declare upon your own oath and according to your own conscience, with no power between you and the God who made you, whether the deft. be guilty or not guilty! And in determining that question, you have not only the power but the right by the law of the land as we contend, to determine all questions both of fact and law, that are involved in a general verdict.

Mr. Paine here turned to the court and proceeded,—I know that this Court has already intimated that the jury has no right to judge of the law in a criminal case, and that the Court would not hear an argument on the question. But we believe this right to be of the utmost importance. We believe it to be essential to the integrity and value of jury trials in criminal cases. That it is not only a most interesting legal question, but one on which the safety of the citizen intimately depends. I know the Court said that the practice of the Federal Courts had been different. But I am prepared to show not only some very high authorities from State Courts in favor of this right, but also, a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States to the same effect, as well as decisions of several of the Circuit Courts, and that they have practiced accordingly. I will show that in one case, after the Judge of a U. S. Court had charged the jury, the counsel for the defendant began his argument to the jury by saying, "he thanked God that what the chief justice had just laid down as law, was not law," and pursued his argument without interruption. I respectfully ask this Court therefore, in view of the vital importance of the question, and of the fact, which I believe is so, that it never has been decided by this court upon argument, to hear us on the right of the jury to judge of both law and fact in criminal case.

The Court stated that there were some dicta in favor of the right, but that the practice of all respectable courts was the other way and such had been its practice for sixteen years, and it could not take up time with hearing an argument on it.

MR. PAINE proceeded:

Then, Gentlemen, as the Court refuses to hear us on your right to judge of the law, I shall be compelled to pass at once to the evidence. It has been proved that the defendant rode on horseback through the street and called together a meeting of his fellow citizens. The right of the people peaceably to assemble and consult on the common good, cannot be denied. Long ago is forbidden to interfere,—it is expressly secured to us by the Constitution of our own state. But it is said that the defendant is the person who called out, "Freemen to the rescue!" This is sworn to by Mr. Reed and Mr. Emmons, as the defendant was passing Wisconsin Street, and by Dr. Arnold near the States. But, gentlemen, it seems to me that the witnesses for the defense, raise a very great doubt, whether the others were not mistaken.—Mr. Emmons, I believe, has the word rescue but once, but Mr. Reed has it as the defendant was passing Wisconsin Street and this building, three or four times, at the top of his voice. But we introduced Mr. Woodhouse, stood on the corner of Wisconsin Street, and Walter Babcock, who stood opposite this building, and they are both quite positive that the word "rescue" was not used by the defendant while in their hearing. His words were, "Freemen turn out!" as they testify.

But you may be told that positive testimony is from its very nature stronger than negative. This is in many cases true. But the degree of superiority of positive over negative test mony, depends upon the degree of probability that those who swear negatively, would have seen or heard that which is positively sworn to, if it had taken place. If my friend Emmons should swear that he fired a nine pounder loaded with grape upon the meeting at the Court house square, and another man who stood by said that no cannon was fired, the negative testimony would be about as strong as the positive, because it would be very improbable that a cannon should have been fired and the man not hear it. So I think it very improbable that the defendant could have called out, "Freemen to the rescue," three or four times at the top of his voice, and neither Mr. Woodhouse Mr. Babcock have heard it. Mr. Arnold, who stood near the States, swears to that expression. But Mr. Church who stood there also, says no such word was used. Mr. Hanley who was a little above heard nothing about "rescue" and Mr. Hurd, one of the witnesses for the prosecution, heard nothing of it. But there is one thing sworn to by Mr. Hurd by which the matter may be explained. Hurd called to the defendt it and asked what was to be done. This identifies the time as the same spoken of by Mr. Arnold because he heard some one ask a question a little above. The defendant in reply to Hurd said "come up and I'll tell you the rest." Now the word, "rest" sounds very much like "free ue." Mr. Arnold may have heard that, and after a rescue was actually effected, may have been impressed with the idea that the defendant said something about "rescue" as he rode through the streets. It seems to me quite as probable that the witnesses for the prosecution, some of whom seem to hold the defendant responsible for all that was done in this city on that day—are mistaken in this, as it is that a number of witnesses on our side and a number of others on theirs, should not have heard the expression if the defendant had used it.

But, Gentlemen, suppose he did use it?—Suppose he did say, "Freemen to the rescue," what did it mean? Can any man suppose for a moment that he intended that the people should be called together should rescue Glover from the jail?—It is impossible! All the acts of the defendant after the meeting assembled, as well as all the proceedings of the meeting, entirely dispel such an idea from the mind. He told them the liberties were in danger. In calling them to the rescue, he might well mean the rescue of their liberties from that danger, by taking legal steps to defend them. It was a mere expression to attract notice and attention. It is frequently used in political contests. Partizans issue their handbills headed "Freemen to the rescue." Editors put the same words in large letters in their papers. Nobody expects violence from acting it, but it is regarded only as an expression to attract the attention. So it was used by this defendant, if used at all, in calling on the people to assemble. And the other expressions used by him as sworn to by several of the witnesses for the prosecution, prove this. He called on all "peaceable citizens to assemble." This rebuts all idea of violence and shows that, on the contrary at the very time of calling the meeting, he used words to notify and warn them that he wished none but peaceable men, who would only pursue the peaceful remedies of the law. And if this is not so—if the defendant called the meeting together to rescue Glover from the jail, why did he not propose it after he got there? Why did he consent himself with proposing only legal remedies—by demanding only Glover's legal rights, and allowing the meeting to adjourn and, to a great degree, disperse without once listing to them the object for which he called them together?—In my judgement, gentlemen, this cannot be explained. The acts of the defendant after the meeting assembled, cannot be reconciled with the idea that he designed a forcible rescue of Glover from the jail when he called them together, whatever expressions to attract attention he may have used in doing so.

Well, gentlemen, it is in proof that the meeting assembled. They organized by the appointment of Gen. Walcott chairman. He is a man well known to all of you. A man as loyal to just laws and the cause of law and order as he is to liberty and right. A man as true as tried steel, and who never yet quailed in the presence of any power. A man who wore the adulation of all who heard him as a witness on the stand, by the fearless and intelligent manner with which he asserted and vindicated the right of every man to a trial by jury on the question of his liberty.

Speeches were made condemning the Fugitive Slave Law. And here, gentlemen, I propose to comment somewhat on the character of that law. The court refuses to hear an argument on its constitutionality, and I did not propose to argue that question here, but I shall be allowed to comment on its character in connection with the proceedings of that meeting. And any what we may about mobs, about disobedience to law, about resistance and rebellion—the cause of it all will be found to be, not any fault in the people, but in the wickedness and cruelty of this act itself. And, Gentlemen, I charge upon this prosecution, that they have come into court before you, and confessed that they are engaged in the execution of an infamous law, and one which it is against conscience to execute. They asked every one of you before you were allowed to take your seats in that box, if you had conscientious scruples against finding a verdict of guilty, against any of your fellow citizens who had violated this law. Suppose the defendant had been on trial for robbing the mail, or for counterfeiting the coin of the United States, or for any other real, crime would they have asked you such a question? It would have been an absurdity. But when the government lays its ban on humanity, and cruelly and barbarously violates the rights of the people, then the prosecutors may well ask questions which show that they know the law they are striving to enforce, is one against which the consciences of men rebel. It is a course which has no parallel. There is nothing like it of which I ever read in the administration of law.

It is true that jurors are asked in capital cases if they have scruples against finding a verdict of guilty, when the punishment is death. But mark the distinction, gentlemen. In that case the question is not founded on the supposition that the juror's conscience approves the act, which is charged upon the defendant as a crime, but upon the supposition that he may conscientiously believe that government has no right to take the life of its citizen even though guilty of the worst crime. But here the question is asked because it is suspected that your consciences might approve the act of the defendant, that you might regard that as a virtue which the government attempts to punish as a vice, and that therefore you might have conscientious scruples against finding a verdict of guilty. I say their course is a confession that they believe the law to be against conscience. And I ask you if it be so uncertain whether the acts which the government calls crimes, be not, really virtues, that its officers must ask of jurors if their consciences would prevent their punishing such acts, may we not well conclude that "there is something rotten in the State of Denmark?"

This law is summary in its proceedings. Its stroke falls as suddenly as that of the pestilence or the plague. As a man in the full vigor of health is swept by the pestilence down awfully to his grave, so by this act a freeman may be hurried suddenly from his high estate, down to the abyss of bondage. Whatever is done therefore to defend one who is seized under it, must be done quickly. This act attempts to overthrow the writ of habeas corpus—it does overthrow the trial by jury. It leaves you and me, gentlemen of the jury, and it leaves us all, liable to be made slaves any day, by the decision of his Honor or of any of his Commissioners. But I am not going into its details. We all know them. We have all examined it. The soul of confidence in man has been set upon it. The best heads it has, are compelled to admit that it is a burst of cruel law. But I will allude to one claim that was put forth for it by my learned friend who is to follow me, on the argument of a case tried not long ago, similar to this. He said he could not understand why this act had excited so strong an opposition. That it was far more favorable to the fugitive than the act of 1793 because under that act the master could seize and take this, an examination must be had. I cannot regard this claim as well founded. The act of '93 left the hunting of fugitives to their owners; and, as we all know, their success was very small. It was not executed often enough to call public attention to its provisions. But the present act places the whole power of the Union at the disposal of the slaveholders. He takes out his warrant and the Marshall and his posse, the navy, and the army of United States, headed by the President in person, if need be, are all liable to be used in hunting down and delivering up, whomsoever the man hunter may claim as his slave. And can an act which brings the whole power of the government to bear on them, be regarded as favorable to fugitives? Experience of its practical operations has not shown it to be so.

Scarcely a week passes, in which we are not shocked by some account of barbarous cruelty in its execution. So powerful has been the influence brought to bear on the officers of the government, that Courts and Commissioners have hastened with alacrity to its execution and to signalize their devotion have sometimes gone farther than its provision required. There is a great error with many in imagining that only slaves can be seized under it, for this is not so. Freemen may be seized,—Freemen have been seized, and delivered up as slaves by the operation of this act. This was the case with the man Daniel at Buffalo; who was savagely knocked down upon a stove where part of his flesh was left when he was taken off. He was taken before Commissioner Smith covered with blood, and so insensible as to be unable to act for himself, and there he was refused time to get his witnesses, and was delivered up to the claimant, as a slave by the Commissioner, who told the people that any body who attempted to interfere with his decree should be shot down. He, too, seemed to have a prejudice for nine-pounders loaded with grape. But he was afterwards taken before Judge Conklin and discharged on the ground that he was free as shown by the evidence of the claimant. His master had sent him into a free state, and that, by slave holding courts has always been held, equivalent to emancipation. This shows how easy it is for a freeman to be made a slave by its operation.

But there is another of its provisions, which is amply and horribly sufficient to destroy the claim set up in its favor by my learned friend. It is that section which provides that the owner may, in the State where he resides, go before any court of record and prove the fact of servitude and the escape, and make up his record which when brought into the free State shall be "conclusive" on the question of freedom. This is deciding on a man's liberty without any day in court. It is striking down his dearest rights, in his absence, without giving him any opportunity to defend them. The only question left by it, in the State where he is apprehended, is as to his identity—upon his right to liberty the record is conclusive. See how easy it is for a freeman to be made a slave by the operation of this section. Imagine a poor boatman, who deep down in his darkened soul has cherished the hope of liberty. He obtains, as they sometimes do, a promise from his owner to sell him his freedom. Cheered by this hope, long weary months and years he toils beneath the burning sun and the driver's lash, expending the vigor of his life to obtain the amount necessary to enable him to own himself. At last he succeeds. The amount is raised. He purchases himself, and obtaining his free papers, departs to some free State, and enjoys for a time that liberty which must be doubly sweet to him. But repentant avarice, or perhaps some revenge of fortune, suggests to the owner that under the Fugitive Act it would be easy for him to reclaim his former slave. He goes before a court with a witness to swear that he had been a slave, and that he had left his master and gone to a free State.—The record is made up, and with a witness to prove the identity, the owner comes on. He comes to His Honor here and gets his warrant, and the man is brought before him. In vain he claims his freedom. In vain he tells how long he had toiled and suffered to win it—in vain he holds up his papers. The record is conclusive, says the Act, and he must go back!

THE COURT.—Mr. Paine, no decent judge or commissioner would ever send a man back under such circumstances.

I think so too, your Honor! But I am unable to perceive how they could avoid it, if this act is to be obeyed. It says the record shall be "conclusive," and if there is any method of questioning that which is conclusive, I am not aware of it. And I think this provision alone is sufficient to account for all the opposition this act has met with, and entirely to overthrow the claim of my learned friend, that it is more favorable to the fugitive and to freemen, than the act of '93. This alone is enough to justify an alarm among the people whenever any man is seized under it. This alone is enough to justify them in assembling together, in denouncing the Act as cruel and unconstitutional, and in taking such legal steps for the protection of liberty, as they might believe the emergency required. And when we add to this all its other horrible provisions, we have an ample justification for the defendant and the meeting which he called, in endeavoring to secure to Glover such protection as the laws could furnish. They did in this respect, what I hope always to see done, whenever the liberty even of the poorest and most despised among us, is placed in jeopardy by the execution of this law.

But, gentlemen, that meeting passed some resolutions which we introduced in evidence before you.—His Honor in his anxiety for the safety of the defendant, said if he had known what they were, he would in mercy to the defendant have advised his counsel not to introduce them; that they were an aggravation of the offence and he should be compelled to charge the jury.

Gentlemen! we look upon those resolutions in an entirely different light. We stood by them on the day when they were passed,—we stand by them here, notwithstanding the intimation of the Court. What are they? What do they demand? They assert the right of Glover to the writ of habeas corpus, and demand that the writ issued in his behalf should be obeyed. They declare that he had a right to a trial by jury on the question of his liberty, and that the people there would do their utmost to secure him such a trial. And are these things crimes? Has it come to this, that we are to be told that it is criminal peaceably to demand the constitutional rights of any man whose liberty is invaded? To demand that he shall have the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus,—that old writ which has ever been like the right arm of freedom, opening the prison doors that had closed on the innocent, and breaking unjust fetters that had bound the free. To demand for him the trial by jury, that great right which has stood as a tower of strength for the people, shielding them from the storms of tyranny and oppression. That right which the people of England have ever maintained with the most watchful vigilance, and which the people of this country have guarded by the most solemn and strong provisions, not only in the Constitution of the United States, but of every State of the Union. Is the defendant to be punished for asking these of why, gentlemen, it is doing the very thing that the District Attorney says we ought to have done. When speaking of the breaking of the jail, he said that was not the way to decide rights, but they should be determined by the tribunals and laws of the country. So the people of that meeting thought. That is what they demanded in their resolutions, that Glover might have the benefit of legal remedies for the protection of his liberty. And it was only after that meeting had done all they could to secure to him legal protection—after they had advised against violence, and asked only for obedience to the laws of the land, and after such obedience was refused, and it was announced to the people that the laws of the State were to be disregarded, that some who were there, under the impulse of the moment, and against the advice of the defendant, resorted to violence to accomplish what it had been the whole object of that meeting to obtain by law.

My learned friend labored long with Gen. Walcott, on the cross-examination, to show that the resolution demanding a trial by jury, indicated an intention on the part of that meeting to interfere with the examination before His Honor, because they must have known that the fugitive law allowed no trial by jury. The witness frankly admitted that there was a discrepancy between the resolution and the fugitive law, and so there is. But did it never occur to my learned friend that there is any thing higher than the Fugitive Slave Law? That high above this infamous act stands the Constitution of the Country, the Supreme Law of the land—forbidding that any man shall be deprived of liberty without due process of law, which terms by their established construction include the trial by jury? Did it never occur to him that if Glover had been brought out for examination before His Honor, those who were at that meeting, might have come with him here, as his friends in his hour of need, and have demanded for him here his constitutional rights, and have asked this court to declare the accused act which robs him of them to be null and void? If it never occurred to him, it occurred to them. And had they done all this, they would have done no more than they

News of the Morning.

The House of Representatives have *re commit*ted the Fox River Rail Road Bill, which renders its passage doubtful. Gen. Wilson has been elected U. S. Senator by the Massachusetts House, and the vote in the Senate will concur. The great storm of Sunday seems to have swept over the whole of the Northern half of the Union. It was as severe on the Atlantic coast as here. The New York Market of yesterday shows a slight improvement.

By the Telegraph we have the most important is the decision of Messrs. Booth and Rycraft to fine and imprisonment for aiding in the rescue of a fugitive slave. We have nothing new from Madison to-day. Our Madison letter makes some interesting developements as to the cost of the Insane Asylum. The fate of the missing Dr. Chapin is still wrapped in mystery. We hope to hear from him, at least.

Another letter from Byron Paine.—We commence to-day, and shall conclude in two more, the publication of Mr. Byron Paine's able defence of S. M. Booth at the recent session of the U. S. Court. It is a noble effort, worthy of every man's attentive study.

The Trains.—The Mails.—The morning train from the West, on the M. & M. Rail Road, due here at noon, got in about 2 P. M. yesterday, and the evening train at 10 P. M. The Eastern Mail, due here the latter and way mail, due here at 6 o'clock this morning. Monday, got in about 6½ o'clock last evening. The snow lies in deep drifts in many places on the road, but a day or two will break the track.

The End of the Rescue Trials.

BOOTH AND RYECRAFT FINED AND IMPRISONED.

In the U. S. Court, yesterday morning, Judge Miller heard and overruled the motion made by the counsel of Messrs. Booth, for a new trial and in arrest of judgment, and immediately thereafter pronounced sentence upon Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft who have both been convicted of the crime, to wit: a violation of the Fugitive Slave Act, in assisting in the rescue of the fugitive Slave, Glover. The Judge sentenced Mr. Booth to be imprisoned for the term of ONE MONTH in the jail of Milwaukee County, and in such other prisons or places as the Court or the Judge thereof may from time to time direct, and that he pay a fine of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and the costs of prosecution to be taxed, and that he be and remain committed until the sentence be complied with.

Mr. Ryecraft was sentenced to THE DAYS' imprisonment in the Milwaukee County Jail, a like term in custody till the fine is paid.—Immediately after the sentence, the U. S. Marshal, Mr. Knox, conducted Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft side by side into the Milwaukee County Jail and delivered them into the custody of the Sheriff.—They will doubtless remain in his keeping during the time prescribed by Judge Miller.

Imprisonment for such a cause entails no disgrace. The evidence whereof Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft stand convicted—that of aiding a fellow-being to regain his freedom—was one in which hundreds of their fellow-citizens participated, and thousands sympathized. The law which they violated is a mockery of human justice, a disgrace to American legislation, and a blot upon the escutcheon of the Republic.—Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft shall have completed their brief term of imprisonment and returned to their usual avocations, ere they be met and greeted by their fellow-citizens, who have suffered and endured for a like cause, and been made the victims of an unconstitutional, and inhuman law.

But enough, or more than sympathy is due to Messrs. Booth and Ryecraft from those, at least, of their fellow-men, who think as they do of the infamous Fugitive Slave Act. The fine imposed upon Mr. Ryecraft is $200; that imposed upon Mr. Booth is $1000, and "costs of prosecution to be taxed," which will pretty surely be $500 or $1000 more, and until these fines are paid they are to remain in prison. Neither of the prisoners can well afford to pay these fines. Nor should they be asked or allowed to do so. Let the People of Wisconsin contribute the means to satisfy these penalties. Let every man who loves Freedom and loathes the Fugitive Slave Act, cast his mite into this fund. And let steps be taken at once to organize a committee to receive the knowledge and apply the monies thus raised.

We understand that a public meeting for this purpose will be held on Thursday or Friday evening next, of which due notice will be given. We hope it at it will be most numerously attended, and that its action will be prompt, decided and of entire success.

From Madison.

Madison, Jan. 20.

The relief from work afforded by the adjournment till Monday is very grateful to those of the members; and long walks here and there about the town and neighborhood have enabled us to take a larger share than usual, of fresh air, and to see something more than a fraction of the improvements in progress. A census of the inhabitants is being taken, and is now completed, and according to "Esquire" reports, the figures are nearly 6,600 already, and "about fifty families not yet taken." The rent price in Madison is very great, as was remarked two or three years ago in the getting up of the legislative Ball to prevent the removal of the capitol from here; and the town does not look as if it would hold 7000 people properly—but then it will never do to go behind the figures, for they "don't lie."—The growth, being granted accurate, exhibits a wonderfully rapid growth, even for our young growing State. And this growth is not, in some places, a mere jotting down on the streets and in the alleys, of cheap, clumsy boxes with tar-paper shingles, but is highly creditable to the taste of the people, and indicative of a comfortable state of temporal affairs. Take, for instance, the village proper, which affords ample sites for residences everywhere, overlooking the lakes, and with a range of prospect of lake and bluffs, and groves of timber, and open prairie, unequalled in the country, and which sites are crowned with pleasant cheerful homes—the region round about, and the hills beyond the lakes, are being filled up and occupied by farms, small and large, taken up by men of "means," for practical and ornamental farming. Much to be envied are the sick people who shall be advised by wise physicians to resort to the Water Cure Establishment, now beginning to rear its walls, beyond Lake Monona, for aid. If the water treatment does not cure them—and I am no believer in the efficacy of curing all the ills that flesh is heir to by wrapping, or plunging, or sitting in, or pouring upon of cold water—fresh air, plenty of exercise, relaxation from business, and the pleasures of hunting, fishing, &c., &c., will cure, pretty certainly. So, success to the enterprise!

To come back from wanderings about town to the town itself, I have already noticed the improved condition of the United States and American Hotels—the Capital House being always A No. 1. The handsome and expensive stone blocks of buildings are fully occupied from basement to attic, with stores and offices, returning ample rents. New churches are completed and in use, though the Congregations do not seem to increase with like proportion as the accommodations. The stocks of goods in many of the stores are large and costly, showing the calls upon the merchants made by a luxurious population; and, in this connection, one item is noticeable, to wit: the jewelry establishment of Roth, under the Capital House. Money must be very easily earned here in Madison, or else the jeweller has a Barnum-like trust in printing ink, and sees his interest in it. The Madison papers are full of his advertisements, and regularly, by special invitation to each, the members are invited to call and buy themselves rich. This is probably the secret of the large sales made from the handsome stock of this enterprising genius. Durrie's bookstore is also an "institution" of which the Madison people have reason to be proud.

Atwaters & Langrishe's Theatre is in full blast,—the billiard salons light up the streets nightly. The stores of potables which passed through Milwaukee for this place last fall would have astonished any one who did not appreciate its capacity for such things in the winter; and in corners and darkened rooms—darkened to outsiders—the wild beasts—Tigers and otherwise—are nightly munching their victims. The lobby is very large, for some reason unknown, since the question of U. S. Senator cannot bring them all here. Each of the candidates, however, has a numerous retinue, some of whom are supposed to be peculiarly fitted to operate upon some particular class of members. It all brings grist to somebody's mill, but at the special request of two or three democratic members, I promised to hint to the candidates that very little has yet been done in the way of oysters, and they are entirely willing to take the risk of disease in the bivalves—indeed they assert that the theory of bivalvular disease is a humbug, especially circulated just now by the candidates to save their pockets. It is a bad state of things, truly.

The Senate yesterday afternoon transacted no interesting piece of business before adjourning over to Monday afternoon. Mr. McGarry had introduced a resolution of instructions to our Congressmen to oppose the alteration of the Naturalization laws, intended, as was said, to "smoke out Sam." The resolution came up in the afternoon, and our friend McGarry squared himself for a fight, standing, like the Disinherited Knight of Ivanhoe, ready for all comers. He briefly expressed his approbation of the bill, and waited for the opposition, but none made its appearance. The resolution was read, and McG. called for the ayes and noes, and Senator Adams led off with an "Aye," and it was "Aye" all the way down the list, and so Sam was not "smoked out"—not being about the premises, probably.

A shabby looking pamphlet was distributed yesterday upon the desks of members, containing the Argument of Charles James Esq., counsel on the part of the State of Wisconsin, and the opinion of Caleb Cushing, Attorney General of the U. S. in the matter of the application of Gov. Barstow for the 5 per cent fund, in May last.—Can anybody tell what we have an Attorney General for in this State, and why it is that when anything is to be done, some other counsel has to be employed?

It is readily granted that if other counsel must be employed, Mr. James had the best claim on record, not only as being one of the original Forty, and a man "who went to school with Frank Pierce," but as being the only one of a fortunate legal connection, who had not yet been fairly provided for. Fillmore, Hall and Haven used to be thought a lucky firm; but the connection which under various names has embraced Messrs. Coon, James, Hunter & Mariner, is as remarkable. The first has been Attorney General, and aued the Canal Land mortgages, and somehow or other got through Appropriation bill No. 152 last winter, without the aid of the Assembly. The second has now had a slice of $600,00,or a good share of it, that being charged to the expense of this "Argument" from the Governor's contingent fund. The third, which is a State Senator, was appointed by the Governor to the office of Private Secretary, established last year, and our friend Marriner had the making of the Canal Land abstracts, a job of some $500, or thereabouts. So the world goes.

But I am keeping you from the pamphlet.

Mr. James occupies 12½ pages in arguing that Uncle Sam has no right to withhold the 5 per cent from Wisconsin. A portion of the argument seems legitimate, but no one who cares for the honor of the state will thank the counsel for pleading infancy as a bar to the supposed debt to the United States, as is done by claiming that the State cannot be held responsible for territorial misdoings. The counsel astonishes Mr. Cushing with an unreasonable display of Latin—characterizing the territorial condition as one which "is a part of Congress infinitely less than an imperium in imperio," and as "a monstrum horrendum among responsible parties."

Caleb don't care for that, and he occupies the remaining 18 pages of the pamphlet with his opinion. After reviewing the history of the whole matter, and reciting the facts that an equivalent for sold and unsold lands 136,996 acres of the Canal Grant were at first withheld from the 500,000 acres granted to the State, but that afterwards the General Land Office consented to allow this State to select the whole of the 500,000 acres; but, at the same time, set off the value of the first named tract at $2,50 per acre, or $313,579 as a debt of this State to be paid to Uncle Sam in the lapse of years out of the 5 per cent fund. This last was the arrangement made by Judge D. H. Brown, for which he received $1,000. Caleb Cushing maintains that this arrangement is all valid, and so the commissioners of school lands have selected and are selling at $1,25 per acre these lands which cost the State $2,50 per acre. Besides, Caleb calls this arrangement a "synallagmatic contract" between Uncle Sam and this State, which settles the question.

I neglected the other day to say anything of a very interesting lecture by Prof. Daniels, entitled "Geology and Theology." The Professor is certainly a very enthusiastic and eloquent lecturer, and his expositions of his favorite science are plain and practical. I wish that our citizens could have an opportunity of listening to his course.

By the by, have you seen the abstract of the contract made by the Insane Commissioners, and the estimate of the probable cost of the building. Just turn the figures in various lights and shades and hold them up to the view of the people. A HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS or a Lunatic Asylum in this year of grace in Wisconsin How do the people take it? And that is not all, for the estimate being $150,000, the actual cost would be nearer $200,000. And the Commissioners think they can get along this year with an appropriation of $52,000! I doubt if they get it. Certainly they will not get it, if there be any way of avoiding the contract, and it is trusted that, inasmuch as there are odd stones about concerning the bids, the State may get out of the difficulty, in which those Commissioners have unwisely, to say nothing worse, placed it. No person who is so unfortunate as to require a State Asylum for a home is half so insane as these officers, who have, under a law designed by those who passed it, if not by those who drew it, only to provide for making preparations for a benevolent enterprise, leaving future legislators to decide upon its extent and rate of progress. It may be that the tax payers of Wisconsin are in for it, but it is to be hoped not.

W. H. W.

SPEECH OF BYRON PAINE,

May it please the Court, and
Gentlemen of the Jury:

The events of the past are very frequently and very properly used to illustrate the events of the present. And therefore, in accordance with a custom with which no one will familiar, I will read a short account of a rescue that took place two thousand years ago, as a fit text for you and me to contemplate in discharging our respective duties in this case.

Acts.—Chap. xii: 1—10—Now about that time, Herod the king, stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

And he killed James the brother of John with the sword.

And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. Then were the days of unleavened bread.

And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing out of the church unto God for him.

And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

And behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

And he went out and followed him, and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

When they past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened of his own accord: and they went out and passed on through one street: and forthwith the angel departed from him.

We have now, Gentlemen of the Jury, fallen upon times when men are indicted for imitating the Angels of God. And though to be convicted on such an indictment would be an honor to any man, and an inheritance of honor to his children; yet that might not repay him for months of weary languishing in prison, shut out from the light and air of heaven, to return, perhaps, with a broken constitution, to a business scattered and destroyed, and a family left destitute, it may be, to pay the penalty of too strong a love of liberty in the bosom of the husband and father. And therefore,—not to avoid infamy, for that it is beyond the power of your verdict to fasten on the defendant, but if possible to avoid suffering, to avoid injustice and oppression, we stand before you in his behalf to convince you that he has done nothing worthy of punishment at your hands—that he is guilty of no violation of the laws of the land.

The Herod of the United States,—by which I mean the Slave Power,—having control of the Government, stretched forth his hand, to vex certain of the poorest and most helpless of the people. I mean that portion who having been born to the boatman's doom, and grown to manhood or to womanhood with as little care or culture as the beasts that perish, had nevertheless in obedience to that divine instinct planted in every human soul, which tells it that it is free, escaped from their thraldom and tasted for a time of the sweets of liberty. It was decreed that they should be taken back to their chains, and to accomplish this, the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850 was passed.

On the evening of the tenth of March last, a man named Joshua Glover, living a few miles from the city of Racine, was arrested by Deputy Marshal Cotton by virtue of a warrant issued under this act. He was arrested in the night.—Under the cover of darkness, the deputy marshal and his assistants came upon the little cabin of that unfortunate man. He was unarmed—they were armed. And yet with that violence which seems to be an unwarrantable from the execution of this law that its record has been written in the blood of its victims, it was found necessary that he should be wounded before he was taken into custody. Then during the silence of the night—that time when sleep falls upon the lids of peaceful men, and guilt and crime are stealing abroad to do those deeds that shun the light—they pursued their way to this city, and at early dawn they cast their prisoner cold, terrified, bruised and bloody into the jail of this County. The deed was done. The process—hard process though it was—was served. The prisoner was in prison.

But, gentlemen! liberty has many votaries; and tongue that are not to be silenced when deeds like those are done. No! It is in vain to attempt it.

> You may as well forbid the mountain pines
> To wag their high tops and to make no noise,
> When they are fretted by the gusts of heaven,
> As to forbid the tongues of liberty to wag in its behalf when it is endangered either by lawless, or by lawful violence.

The news of this arrest spread like wild-fire among the generous freemen of Racine. It was sent here upon the lightning's track, and when it left that track, it spread with scarcely less swiftness, along the electric cords that bind all human hearts together in that great bond which lies at the foundation of the christian's love, and which democracy has symbodied in civil government, the bond of human brother-hood.

The artizan left his shop, the lawyer his office, the priest his study and the merchant his counter, and men met together on the streets, and talked of this matter with astonishment and alarm. Was there anything strange or unnatural in this? On the contrary, would it not have been most strange and unnatural had it been otherwise? Would it not have been a most damning fact against this people if they could have seen the liberty of a fellow man stricken down and destroyed, with a cold and heartless indifference? No, Gentlemen! such is not human nature.

> —If damned custom have not brassed it so,
> That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Such is not even the nature of the brute. For when the butcher has spilt the blood of his victim on the earth, and its fellows come near the spot, they rush together with wild looks and wild bellowings, that testify their anxiety for the fate of their murdered comrade.—And as man is elevated above the beasts, so in his soul does the quality of sympathy glow with a brighter ness and warmth that give to the paths of this rough world the purest and sweetest pleasure they possess.

We all remember poor Avery, who, by some disastrous chance, was hurried to the brink of Niagara, where he clung for a time to the rocks with all that tenacity with which men strive for life. His situation became known, and it was telegraphed in all directions. And while thousands were gathering to the spot from neighboring places, to do what mortal power could do to save him, thousands upon thousands more all through the land, were awaiting in anxious and painful suspense, the fate of the unfortunate man. And when at last, finding himself beyond the reach of human aid, worn out by his struggle with the mighty element, he sprang up with a cry of wild despair, and went down into the boiling and thundering abyss, a throb of anguish was felt by the hearts of the whole people.

Such facts are honorable to human nature, and it was the same feeling that was manifested in the case of Glover. He, too, was on a precipice more fearful than Niagara. A precipice at the bottom of which lay, not the brief agonies of death, but long years of wasting sorrow for himself and his children after him, from which both he and they would lie down beneath the clods of the valley, as a peaceful and pleasant refuge.

I say, therefore, that it was a fact honorable to the people of this city and Racine, that they felt and manifested a strong interest in the fate of Joshua Glover, when seized by those who wished to deprive him of his liberty, that best gift of God to man, without which life itself is nothing.

A writ of habeas corpus was issued in his favor. The Court did not allow us to give the writ in evidence, but there is sufficient before you to show that a writ was issued, and that it was delivered to Sheriff Page. The people waited for sometime, hoping that the great writ of liberty would be obeyed and that Glover's right to freedom could be determined, and protected by that great safeguard of the rights of us all. But when it was noised abroad that Glover was to be brought before the Judge of this Court for examination, without any regard to the writ that had been issued in his favor, the excitement became intense and the people assembled in great numbers at the Court House Square. A meeting was organized. Speeches were made expressive of the sentiments of the speakers, and resolutions adopted expressive of the sentiments of the meeting. In the meantime the day wore on and yet nothing was heard from the writ of habeas corpus. The people began to get more and more alarmed. They began to think the boasted writ of liberty, no better than blank paper. They appointed various committees to see that Glover was not smuggled away, and to learn what was to be done with the writ. All day they labored, earnestly yet mildly, to secure such protection as the laws could give to the poor trembling fugitive.—But at last it was announced to the crowd, by a committee, who had waited on Judge Miller, that the writ would not be obeyed by the Deputy Marshal.

Some remarks were made by one or two individuals, and as the meeting was about to disperse, some spirits among them, impatient at the delay—indignant at what they believed to be a disregard of the law and power of the State, rushed for the jail, and did for Glover what the Angel of the Lord did for Peter. They broke open the prison door—they bore him forth—they placed him on a wagon and hurried him away while a shout for freedom that shook the heavens went up from that vast multitude,—a shout that startled tyranny in its dreams of power—a shout whose echoes are still ringing like a triumphal song of liberty chanted by the mighty voice of the people. The proceeding caused no alarm. On the contrary, as the vast mass swept by in the track of the flying fugitive, women and children who flee from evil stood in the doors of their houses and clapped their hands for joy.

It is for aiding in this escape that the defendant is indicted. There is no proof that he took any part, or aided in the breaking of the jail.—But he is sought to be charged with crime, because he exercised the privilege of an American freeman, to attend a public meeting and to express his opinion of public acts; and because he took an active part to obtain legal relief for a fellow-being whose liberty he believed to be endangered. It is this that gives this case its most transcendant interest, before which the mere personal interest of the defendant dwindles into insignificance. For it is this that presents it in the light of a war upon the freedom of speech—a war upon the right of the people to assemble and express their sentiments upon any and all subjects of public concern, and to take measures to avail themselves of the remedies furnished by the laws. And when this issue is forced upon us we shall meet it without shrinking. His enemies have in derision called this defendant the Mary Booth. There may be more truth in their words than they thought. The tree of liberty is watered by the blood of martyrs. And let me tell you that if he is to suffer for exercising the rights of an American citizen, his place will be filled by martyrs whose name is legion, who will maintain those rights at all hazards, unterrified by fines or imprisonment, or even death itself.

But, gentlemen, before proceeding to the examination of the evidence in this case, let us pause for a little time, to settle clearly in our minds the function which the laws assign to each of us in the drama we are now performing. On the one side is the government of the United States charging crime upon the defendant, and appearing here by the Dist. Att'y and assistant counsel whose duty it is to labor for conviction. On the other side is the defendant, asserting his innocence, appearing here by us, his counsel, whose legal duty and constitutional right it is, to urge in his behalf whatever may make that innocence appear. His Honor has to preside over and direct the trial according to law, and to instruct the jury as to the law applicable to the case. But upon you, gentlemen, devolves the highest and most responsible function of all. It is for you and each one of you to declare upon your own oath and according to your own conscience, with no power between you and the God who made you, whether the defendant be guilty or not guilty! And in determining that question, you have not only the power but the right by the law of the land, as we contend, to determine all questions both of fact and law, that are involved in a general verdict.

Mr. Paine here turned to the court and proceeded,—I know that this Court has already intimated that the jury has no right to judge of the law in a criminal case, and that the court would not hear an argument on the question. But we believe this right to be of the utmost importance. We believe it to be essential to the integrity and value of jury trials in criminal cases. That it is not only a most interesting legal question, but one on which the safety of the citizen in its unsteady depends. I know the Court said that the practice of the Federal Courts had been different. But I am prepared to show not only some very high authorities from State Courts in favor of this right, but also, a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States to the same effect, as well as decisions of several of the Circuit Courts, and that they have practiced accordingly. I will show that in one case, after the Judge of a U. S. Court had charged the jury, the counsel for the defendant began his argument to the jury by saying, "I am thanked God that what the Court has just laid down as law was not law," and pursued his argument without interruption. I respectfully ask this Court therefore, in view of the vital importance of the question, and of the fact, which I believe is so, that it never has been decided by this court upon argument, to hear us on the right of the jury to judge of both law and fact in criminal cases.

The Court stated that there were some dicta in favor of the right, but that the practice of all respectable courts was the other way and such had been its practice for sixteen years, and it could not take up time with hearing an argument on it.

Mr. Paine proceeded:

Then, Gentlemen, as the Court refuses to hear us on your right to judge of the law, I shall be compelled to pass at once to the evidence. It has been proved that the defendant rode on horseback through the street and called together a meeting of his fellow citizens. The right of the people peaceably to assemble, and consult on the common good, cannot be denied. Congress is forbidden to impair it,—it is expressly secured to us by the Constitution of our own state. But it is said that the defendant is he rode, called out, "Freemen to the rescue!" This is sworn to by Mr. Reed and Mr. Emmons, as the defendant was passing Wisconsin Street, and by Mr. Babcock on the square. It is for you, gentlemen, to say what credit the witnesses for the defense, raise a very great doubt, whether the others were not mistaken.—Mr. Emmons, I believe, has the word rescue but once, but Mr. Reed has it as the defendant was passing Wisconsin Street and this building, three or four times, at the top of his voice. But we introduced Mr. Wood who stood on the corner of Wisconsin Street, and Walter Babcock, who stood opposite this building, and they are both quite positive that the word "rescue" was not used by the defendant while in their hearing. His words were, "Freemen turn out," as they testify.

But you may be told that positive testimony is from its very nature stronger than negative.—This is in many cases true. But the degree of superiority of positive over negative testimony, depends upon the degree of probability that those who swear negatively, would have seen or heard that which is positively sworn to, if it had taken place. If my friend Emmons should swear that he fired a nine pounder loaded with grape upon the meeting at the Court house square, and another man who stood by said that no cannon was fired, the negative testimony would be about as strong as the positive, because it would be very improbable that a cannon should have been fired at it. So I think it very improbable that the defendant could have called out, "Freemen to the rescue," three or four times at the top of his voice, and neither Mr. Wood nor Mr. Babcock have heard it. Mr. Arnold, who stood near the States, swears to that expression. But Mr. Church who stood there also, says no such word was used. Mr. Hanley who was a little above heard nothing about "rescue" and Mr. Hurd, one of the witnesses for the prosecution, heard nothing of it. But there is one thing sworn to by Mr. Hurd by which the matter may be explained. Hurd called to the defendant and asked what was to be done. The defendant in the same time as the same spoken of by Mr. Arnold because he heard some one ask a question a little above. The defendant in reply to Hurd said "come up and I'll tell you the rest." Now the word, "rest" sounds very much like "rescue."—Mr. Arnold may have heard that, and after a rescue was actually effected, may have become impressed with the idea that the defendant said something about "rescue" as he rode through the streets. It seems to me quite as probable that the witnesses for the prosecution, some of whom seem to hold the defendant responsible for all that was done in this city on that day—are mistaken in this, as it is that a number of witnesses on our side and a number of others on theirs, should not have heard the expression if the defendant had used it.

But, Gentlemen, suppose he did use it?—Suppose he did say, "Freemen to the rescue," what did it mean? Can any man suppose for a moment that he intended that the people so called together should rescue Glover from the jail?—It is impossible! All the acts of the defendant after the meeting assembled, as well as all the proceedings of the meeting, entirely dispel such an idea from the mind. He told them the liberties were in danger. In calling them to the rescue, he might well mean the rescue of their liberties from that danger, by taking legal steps to defend them. It was a mere expression to attract notice and attention. It is frequently used in political contests. Partizans issue their handbills headed "Freemen to the rescue." Editors put the same words in large letters in their papers. Nobody expects violence from seeing it, but it is regarded only as an expression to attract the attention. So it was used by this defendant, if used at all, in calling on the people to assemble. And the other expressions used by him as sworn to by several of the witnesses for the prosecution, prove this. He called on all "peaceable citizens to assemble." This rebuts all idea of violence and shows that, on the contrary at the very time of calling the meeting, he uses words to notify and warn them that his wished purpose but peaceable ones, who would only pursue the peaceful remedies of the law. And if this is not so—if the defendant called the meeting together to rescue Glover from the jail, why did he not propose it after he got there? Why did he consent himself with proposing only legal remedies—by demanding only Glover's legal rights, and allowing the meeting to adjourn and, to a great degree, disperse without once inviting it there to the object for which he called them together?—In my judgement, gentlemen, this cannot be explained. The acts of the defendant after the meeting assembled, cannot be reconciled with the idea that he designed a forcible rescue of Glover from the jail when he called them together, whatever expressions to attract attention he may have used in doing so.

Well, gentlemen, it is in proof that the meeting assembled. They organized by the appointment of Gen. Wolcott chairman. He is a man well known to all of you. A man as loyal to just laws and the cause of law and order as he is to liberty and right. A man as true as tried steel, and who never yet quailed in the presence of any power. A man who was the administration of all who heard him as a witness on the stand, by the fearless and intelligent manner with which he asserted and vindicated the right of every man to a trial by jury on the question of his liberty.

Speeches were made condemning the Fugitive Slave Law. And here, gentlemen, I propose to comment somewhat on the character of that law. The court refuses to hear an argument on its unconstitutionality, and I did not propose to argue that question here, but I shall be allowed to comment on its character in connection with the proceedings of that meeting. And say what we may about mobs, about disobedience to law, about resistance and rebellion—the cause of it all will be found to be, not any fault in the people, but in the wickedness and cruelty of this act itself. And, Gentlemen, I charge upon this prosecution, that they have come into court before you, and confessed that they are engaged in the execution of an infamous law, and one which is against conscience to execute. They asked every one of you before you were allowed to take your seats in that box, if you had conscientious scruples against finding a verdict of guilty, against any of your fellow citizens who had violated this law. Suppose the defendant had been on trial for robbing the mail, or for counterfeiting the coin of the United States, or for any other real, crime would they have asked you such a question? It would have been an absurdity. But when the government lays its ban on an act, and cruelly and barbarously violates the rights of the people, then the prosecutors may well ask questions which show that they know the law they are striving to enforce, is one against which the consciences of men rebel. It is a course which has no parallel. There is nothing like it of which I ever read in the administration of law.

It is true that jurors are asked in capital cases if they have scruples against finding a verdict of guilty, when the punishment is death. But mark the distinction, gentlemen. In that case the question is not founded on the supposition that the juror's conscience approves the act, which is charged upon the defendant as a crime, but upon the supposition that he may conscientiously believe that government has no right to take the life of its citizen even though guilty of the worst crime. But here the question is asked because it is suspected that your consciences might approve the act of the defendant, that you might regard that as a virtue which the government attempts to punish as a vice, and that therefore you might have conscientious scruples against finding a verdict of guilty. I say their course is a confession that they believe the law to be against conscience. And I ask you if it be so uncertain whether the acts which the government calls crimes, be not really virtues, that its officers must ask of jurors if their consciences would prevent their punishing such acts, may we not well conclude that "there is something rotten in the State of Denmark?"

This law is summary in its proceedings. Its stroke falls as suddenly as that of the pestilence or the plague. As a man in the full vigor of health is swept by the pestilence down swiftly to his grave, so by this act a freeman may be hurled suddenly from his high estate, down to the abyss of bondage. Whatever is done therefore to defend one who is seized under it, must be done quickly. This act attempts to overthrow the writ of habeas corpus—it does overthrow the trial by jury. It leaves you and me, gentlemen of the jury, and it leaves us all, liable to be made slaves any day, by the decision of his Honor or of any of his Commissioners. But I am not going into its details. We all know them. We have all examined it. The seal of condemnation has been set upon it by the highest authorities, are compelled to admit that it is a harsh and cruel law. But I will allude to one claim that was put forth for it by my learned friend who is to follow me, on the argument of a case tried not long ago, similar to this. He said he could not understand why this act had excited so strong an opposition. That it was far more favorable to the fugitive than the act of 1793 because under that act the master could seize and take them away without any examination, while under this, an examination must be had. I cannot regard this claim as well founded. The act of '93 left the hunting of fugitives to their owners; and, as we all know, their success was very small. It was not executed often enough to call public attention to its provisions. But the present act places the whole power of the Union at the disposal of the slave-catchers. He takes out his warrant and the Marshall and his posse, the navy and the army of United States, headed by the President in person, if need be, are all liable to be used in hunting down and delivering up, whomsoever the man hunter may claim as his slave. And can an act which brings the whole power of the government to bear on them, be regarded as favorable to fugitives? Experience of its practical operations has not shown it to be so.

Scarcely a week passes, in which we are not shocked by some account of barbarous cruelty in its execution. So powerful has been the influence brought to bear on the officers of the government, that Courts and Commissioners have hastened with alacrity to its execution and to signalize their devotion have sometimes gone farther than its provision required. There is a great error with many in imagining that only slaves can be seized under it, for this is not so. Freemen may be seized,—Freemen have been seized, and delivered up as slaves by the operation of this act. This is the case with the man Daniel at Buffalo; who was savagely knocked down upon a stove where part of his flesh was left when he was taken off. He was taken before Commissioner Smith covered with blood, and so insensible as to be unable to act for himself, and there he was refused time to get his witnesses, and was delivered up to the claimant, as a slave by the Commissioner, who told the people that any body who attempted to interfere with his decree should be shot down. He, too, seemed to have a predilection for nine-pounders loaded with grape. But he was afterwards taken before Judge Conklin and discharged on the ground that he was free as shown by the evidence of the claimant. His master had sent him into a free state, and that, by slave holding courts has always been held, equivalent to emancipation. This shows how easy it is for a freeman to be made a slave by its operation.

But there is another of its provisions, which is amply and horribly sufficient to destroy the claim set up in its favor by my learned friend. It is that section which provides that the owner may in the State where he resides, go before any court of record and prove the fact of servitude and the escape, and make up his record which when brought into the free State shall be "conclusive" on the question of freedom. This is deciding on a man's liberty without any day in court. It is striking down his dearest rights, in his absence, without giving him any opportunity to defend them. The only question left by it, in the State where he is apprehended, is as to his identity—upon his right to liberty the record is conclusive. See how easy it is for a freeman to be made a slave by the operation of this section. Imagine a poor boatman, who deep down in his darkened soul has cherished the hope of liberty. He obtains, as they sometimes do, a promise from his owner to sell him his freedom. Cheered by this hope, long weary months and years he toils beneath the burning sun and the driver's lash, expending the vigor of his life to obtain the amount necessary to enable him to own himself. At last he succeeds. The amount is raised. He purchases himself, and obtaining his free papers, departs to some free State, and enjoys for a time that liberty which must be doubly sweet to him. Repentant avarice, or perhaps some reverse of fortune, suggests to the owner that under the Fugitive Act it would be easy for him to reclaim his former slave. He goes before a court with a witness to swear that he had such a slave, and that he had left his master and gone to a free State.—The record is made up and with a witness to prove the identity, the owner comes on. He comes to His Honor here and gets his warrant, and the man is brought before him. In vain he claims his freedom. In vain he tells how long he had toiled and suffered to win it—in vain he holds up his papers. The record is conclusive, says the Act, and he must go back!

The Court.—Mr. Paine, no decent judge or commissioner would ever send a man back under such circumstances.

I think so too, your Honor! But I am unable to perceive how they could avoid it if this act is to be obeyed. It says the record shall be "conclusive," and if there is any method of questioning that which is conclusive, I am not aware of it. And I think the provision alone is sufficient to account for all the opposition this act has met with, and certainly to overthrow the claim of my learned friend, that it is more favorable to the fugitive and to freemen, than the act of '93. This alone is enough to justify an alarm among the people whenever any man is seized under it. This alone is enough to justify them in assembling together, in denouncing the Act as cruel and unconstitutional, and in taking such legal steps for the protection of liberty, as they might believe the emergency required. And when we add to these all its other horrible provisions, we have an ample justification for the defendant and the meeting which he called, in endeavoring to secure to Glover such protection as the laws could furnish. They did in this respect, what I hope always to see done, whenever the liberty even of the poorest and most despised among us is placed in jeopardy by the execution of this law.

But, gentlemen, that meeting passed some resolutions which we introduced in evidence before you.—His Honor in his anxiety for the safety of the defendant, said if he had known what they were, he would in mercy to the defendant have advised his counsel not to introduce them; that they were an aggravation of the offence and he should be compelled so to charge the jury.

Gentlemen I we look upon those resolutions in an entirely different light. Were read by them on the day when they were passed,—we stand by them here, notwithstanding the intimation of the Court. What are they? What do they demand? They assert the right of Glover to the writ of habeas corpus, and demand that the writ issued in his behalf should be obeyed. They declare that he had a right to a trial by jury on the question of his liberty, and that the people there would do their utmost to secure him such a trial. And are these things crimes? Has it come to this, that we are to be told that it is criminal peacefully to demand the constitutional rights of any man whose liberty is invaded? To demand that he shall have the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus,—that old writ which has ever been like the right arm of freedom, opening the prison doors that had closed on the innocent, and breaking unjust fetters that had bound the free. To demand for him the trial by jury, that great right which has stood as a tower of strength for the people, shielding them from the storms of tyranny and oppression. That right which the people of England have ever maintained with the most watchful vigilance, and which the people of this country have guarded by the most solemn and strong provisions, not only in the Constitution of the United States, but of every State of the Union. Is the defendant to be punished for asking these?

Why, gentlemen, it is doing the very thing that the District Attorney says we ought to have done. When speaking of the breaking of the jail, he said that was not the way to decide rights, but they should be determined by the tribunals and laws of the country. So the people of that meeting thought. That is what they demanded in their resolutions, that Glover might have the benefit of legal remedies for the protection of his liberty. And it was only after that meeting had done all they could to secure to him legal protection—after they had advised against violence, and asked only for obedience to the laws of the land, and after such obedience was refused, and it was announced to the people that the laws of the State were to be disregarded, that some who were there, under the impulse of the moment, and against the advice of the defendant, resorted to violence to accomplish what it had been the whole object of that meeting to obtain by law.

My learned friend labored long with Gen. Wolcott, on the cross-examination, to show that the resolution demanding a trial by jury, indicated an intention on the part of that meeting to interfere with the examination before His Honor, because they must have known that the fugitive law allowed no trial by jury. The witness frankly admitted that there was a discrepancy between the resolution and the fugitive law, and so there is. But did it never occur to my learned friend that there is any thing higher than the Fugitive Slave Law? That high above this infamous act stands the Constitution of the Country, the Supreme Law of the land—forbidding that any man shall be deprived of liberty without the process of law, which terms by their settled construction include the trial by jury? Did it never occur to him that if Glover had been brought out for examination before His Honor, those who were at that meeting, might have come with him here, as his friends in his hour of need, and have demanded for him here his constitutional rights, and have asked this court to declare the accused act which robs him of them to be null and void? If it never occurred to him, it occurred to them. And had they done all this, they would have done no more than they had a right to do. Their efforts might have been in vain; Glover's fate might have been sacrificed, but they would have fulfilled their resolution, and done what they could in his behalf.

I assert, therefore, Gentlemen, that there is nothing in those resolutions that points to anything but a lawful course. And whatever others may think, I, for one, shall

TO THE PHYSICIANS OF THE WEST!

And to All who use Liquor as a Medicine or as a Beverage!

PHYSICIANS now prescribe Alcoholic Liquors for Medicinal purposes as should give the preference to WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS.

1. It is manufactured in Schiedam, in Holland, and exclusively in the factory of the proprietor, by processes and from materials here unemployed and unknown.

2. It is proved, by the repeated analysis of several eminent Chemists, to be entirely free from the pernicious fusil oil, which remains in every kind of liquor distilled from grain, and which is the cause of the nervous and visceral derangement, serious congestion, and morbid desire for habitual and unnatural indulgence, which such liquors invariably lead to as a consequence.

3. It is proved by the same unerring tests that the Juniper Gin is not flavored with the coarse, acrid and indigestible oil of turpentine heretofore used, but with the specifically lighter, more volatile, aromatic and medicinal of the two essential oils of the Italian juniper berry, neglected by every other manufacturer.

4 It is chemically proved to be absolutely pure in its rectification—a quality obtained by an entirely new process and which no other Holland Gin in the world has acquired.

5. It is approved by extensive medical experience and testimony, to be a valuable and efficient as well as an agreeable remedy in many cases of incipient dropsy, gravel, chronic gout, rheumatism, flatulency, colic, concretions in the kidney, and bladder, dyspepsia, fever and ague, general debility, sluggish circulation of the blood, deficient assimilation of food and exhausted vital energy.

6. It is a most grateful and renovating cordial, and when used in excess, never inflames the system or induces inebriety, but tends rather to subdue the latter frailty, by creating a dislike to all inferior liquors And thus variably corrects the ill effects of bad water, whether in swampy or limestone districts In all of these enumerated qualities it has no rival in any market in the world.

Since the introduction of this celebrated medicinal beverage into the United States, a number of Liquor Houses in New York and other large cities have commenced counterfeiting it. The genuine is only sold in quart and pint bottles, hands nicely wrapped in yellow paper, with my name on the bottle, cork and label. I would advise those who use it medicinally, to purchase by the bottle, as these are frequently filled my bottles with common Gin and sold for the genuine. For sale by all the respectable druggists in the United states.

Sole Manufacturer and Importer,

THE ABOVE CUT REPRESENTS MY

CORN AND COB MILL,

With two horses on one of the levers; there should be one on each. I was here at the State Fair, and promised a number that I should be here soon to reside and manufacture these Mills, and give them notice through the papers, and after supplying a few immediate customers, I am now prepared to furnish to those that may favor me with a call.

I shall have one constantly on hand to exhibit, or for use, free of charge.

COME AND TRY IT.

Warranted to be durable, and will keep them in repair free of charge

The Mill weighs about four hundred pounds I furnish the Mill, Hopper, bolts, all except the box and poles, and those will not cost to exceed five dollars, with directions to fill.

The two Cord Horses will grind from 9 to 10 bushels Corn Cob per hour, fine enough for feed; and 4 bushels of Shelled Corn, or with a mixture of Oats, in the same time with one horse.

STATE OF WISCONSIN, } ss Milwaukee County Court
MILWAUKEE COUNTY. } IN PROBATE.

In the matter of the application of Charles T. Meinig, Guardian of Franz Moritz Baumgarten, a minor, for license to sell the Real Estate of said minor:

IT appearing to the satisfaction of this Court, from the application of Charles T. Meinig, Guardian of Franz Moritz Baumgarten, a minor, that it would be beneficial to said Ward that the Real Estate of said Ward should be sold, and the proceeds thereof put out on interest.

It is Ordered, That said application be heard before me at the Probate Office in the City of Milwaukee, on the 20th day of February, 1855, at 10 o'clock A. M., and that the next of kin of said Ward, and all persons interested in said Estate, appear before this Court, at the time and place above specified, to show cause why license should not be granted for the sale of said Real Estate.

Ordered further, That a copy of the above order be published for three successive weeks, in the "Sentinel," a newspaper circulating in said County, prior to said hearing. Dated January 20th, 1855.

CITY LAND OFFICE.

A GRAND OPPORTUNITY, WHICH SELDOM OFFERS.

I HAVE FOR SALE, THE DWELLING HOUSE AND TWO LOTS, of A. W. HATCH, Esq., corner of Van Buren and Knapp sts. The property is in the most desirable and valuable part of the City. The House is one of comfort and convenience. There are several conveniences in this house that you will seldom find. The house, for the first ward appearance, is rather built to last—is a brick house, and better than a frame, for it is filled in with brick, and then inside upon the lathes and then weatherboarded. Twenty cords of wood will keep this house warm all winter. The cellar is under, where you will take sixty cords to keep others comfortable. There are two parlors and four other rooms on the first floor and five or six chambers in second story, together with woodhouse, barn, cistern, well, &c., &c; and also a yard, filled with fruit trees and shrubbery.

The property is worth, and I should have sold it early last summer for full, forteen or twelve thousand dollars, but it can now be purchased at a great bargain, and he who should be so lucky as to get it, will save a prize. It must and will be sold within the next ten days. Any who have any offers to make, will do me and I will tell them the price and terms. jan17 CALEB WALL.

WHEREAS, It is believed that the several fires which occurred on the nights of Tuesday and Wednesday of the present week, were the work of incendiaries or persons who were the worse of intoxication: Now, by virtue of the Ordinances in such cases made and provided, I, HORACE H. GRIFFIN, Mayor of the City of Milwaukee, do hereby offer a reward of TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS, to be paid by said city to any person or persons who shall give such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person concerned in setting or causing either of said fires, whereby any of the several buildings were destroyed on either of said nights. If more than one person was acting in causing each one who may be convicted thereon, to the payment of personal damages, furnishing the information leading to such arrest and conviction.

And furthermore, I hereby in like manner offer a reward of TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS to any person or persons who will give such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person who has not for in 1854, whereby such houses be burned, or other buildings have been destroyed or seriously damaged.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand officially, this 5th day of January, 1855.

CITY LAND OFFICE,
LAW BUILDINGS, WISCONSIN-ST.

I HAVE a Farm to exchange for a House and Lot in this City. The Farm, 75½ acres, with all the necessary improvements, is situated in the town of Lake, 2 miles west of Brantford; fifty men employed by the company, went down this morning to open the road. Nothing heard from them yet. Track unobstructed and clear at Ridgeway—the place of Saturday's riot.

The 13 persons are still under guard at Fort Erie. The magistrates of Fort Erie have made a requisition for troops and parties expected to-night from Niagara, C. W.

The Liquor Law in Ohio.

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.

The Supreme Court of Ohio, on Saturday, decided that the Liquor Law passed by the Legislature, was constitutional, and the Law is of a stringent character, and prohibits retailing liquors with the exception of native wine, beer and cider. Penalty for violation being fine and imprisonment. Several coffee houses and hotel keepers, who were arrested and found guilty for violating the law some two months ago, but whose sentences were deferred by an appeal to the Supreme Court will now be imprisoned in the Co. Jail.

Public sentiment appears to favor the law, and its enforcement will break up all the drinking establishments in the State.

The Storm at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Jan 22nd.

The storm was terrific here; 10 schooners sunk in front of the city. Houses were unroofed, and numberless minor disasters occurred. There are rumors that some lives are lost, but we believe they are incorrect.

TO THE PHYSICIANS OF THE WEST!

And to All who use Liquor as a Medicine or as a Beverage!

PHYSICIANS who prescribe Alcoholic Liquors for Medicinal purposes should give the preference to WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS.

It is manufactured in Schiedam, in Holland, and exported only in the factory of the proprietor, by processes and from materials there unemployed and unknown.

2. It is proved, by the repeated analysis of several eminent Chemists, to be entirely free from the pernicious fusil oil, which remains in every kind of liquor distilled from grain, and which is the cause of the nervous and visceral derangements, nervous congestion, and morbid desire for alcoholic and other stimulants, which such liquors habitual use tends to generate.

3. It is proved by the same unerring tests that the Juniper Gin is not flavored with the coarse, acrid and indigestible Oil of turpentine heretofore used, but with the specifically lighter, more volatile, aromatic and medicinal oil of the two essential oils of the Italian juniper berry, neglected by every other manufacturer.

4. It is chemically proved to be absolutely pure in its constitution—a quality obtained by an entirely new process and which no other Holland Gin in the world has acquired.

5. It is proved by extensive medical experience and testimony, to be a valuable and agreeable remedy in many cases of incipient dropsy, gravel, chronic gout, rheumatism, catarrh, colic, concretions in the kidney, and bladder, dyspepsia, fever and ague, general debility, sluggish circulation of the blood, deficient assimilation of food and exhausted vital energy.

6. It is a strengthful and renovating cordial, and when used as directed, it never inflames the system or induces inebriety, but tends rather to subdue the latter frailty, by creating a dislike to all inferior liquors. And it invariably corrects the ill effects of bad water, whether in swampy or limestone districts. In all of these enumerated qualities it has no rival in any part of the world.

Before the introduction of this celebrated medicinal beverage into the United States, a number of Liquor Houses in New York and the other large cities have commenced counterfeiting it. The genuine is only sold in quart and pint bottles, hands nicely wrapped in yellow paper, with my name on the bottle, cork and label. I would advise those who use it medicinally, to purchase by the bottle, as there are those frequently selling bottles with common rum and spirits for the genuine. For sale by all the respectable druggists in the United States.

CORN AND COB MILL,

With two horses on one of the levers; there should be one on each. I was here at the State Fair, and premised a number that I should be here soon to reside and manufacture these Mills, and give them notice through the papers, and after supplying a few immediate customers, I am now prepared to furnish to those that may favor me with a call.

I shall have one constantly on hand to exhibit, or for use, free of charge.

COME AND TRY IT.

Warranted to be durable, and will keep them in repair free of charge.

The Mill weighs about four hundred pounds. I furnish the Mill, Hopper, bolts, all except the box and pulley, and those will not cost to exceed five dollars, with directions to fill.

Two Good Horses will grind from 8 to 10 bushels Corn Cob per hour, fine enough for feed; and 4 bushels of Shelled Corn with a mixture of Oats, in the same time with one horse.

I am manufacturing at

STATE OF WISCONSIN, } ss. Milwaukee County Court
MILWAUKEE COUNTY, } IN PROBATE.

In the matter of the application of Charles T. Melms, Guardian of Franz Moritz Baumgarten, a minor, for license to sell the Real Estate of said minor:

IT appearing to the satisfaction of this Court, from the application of Charles T. Melms, Guardian of Franz Moritz Baumgarten, a minor, that it would be beneficial to said Ward that the Real Estate of said Ward should be sold, and that proceedings thereof be had as by law:

It is Ordered, That said application be heard before me at the Probate Office in the City of Milwaukee, on the 20th day of February, 1855, at 10 o'clock A. M., and that the next of kin of said Ward, and all persons interested in said Estate, appear before this Court, at the time and place above specified, to show cause why license should not be granted for the sale of said Real Estate.

Ordered further, That a copy of the above order be published for three successive weeks, in the "Sentinel," a newspaper circulating in said County, prior to said hearing. Dated January 20th, 1855.

MRS. SARAH A. COOLEY
Wisconsin Female Seminary,
HAS REMOVED TO
Fox Lake, Dodge County, Wisconsin,

AND WILL RE-OPEN HER SEMINARY AT THAT place on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1855.

The same three years' course (commonly called Collegiate,) with Preparatory and Ornamental branches, as formerly, will be pursued.

Familiar Lectures will be given on Physical Education, and the numberless little things that constitute the truly educated lady.

It will be the object of the Principal to aid her Pupils in securing such an education as shall, in the highest sense, so properly cultivate the intellect, the discipline, which and encourage all the purer and more refined emotions of the heart; in short, such an education as shall form a well balanced character, fitting them for any situation in life.

Pupils for the present will be received for the quarter. Tuition—of fifteen and eleven weeks, the remainder of the year, will be at the rate of ten week.

Tuition as formerly, half in advance. Board in good families from $1.50 to $2.00.

Mrs. Cooley seems that past success, and expressions of public confidence, render further references unnecessary.

Fox Lake, Dec. 26, 1854. jan2-w5t

TO THE PUBLIC.

MR. J. P. SARGEANT
Would respectfully inform the citizens of Milwaukee and vicinity that he has opened a NEW DAGUERREAN GALLERY, on Walker's Point, in Walker's Block, and is now ready to accommodate all persons with a true Daguerreotype Miniature of the best and most improved style of the art. Daguerreotypes taken in clear or cloudy weather, in the best style, for One Dollar and upwards, and warranted to give satisfaction.

MR. SARGEANT has been in this City for the past eight weeks, in E. W. Fowler's Gallery, and has given perfect satisfaction to all customers, and hopes that he will be patronized in his New Gallery.

☞ Please call and examine his work.

MUSIC!

MR. J. P. SARGEANT would respectfully inform his friends and the public in general, that he has a good COTILLION BAND, and is now ready to furnish Music in large or small bands, for Cotillion Parties or Balls, at the shortest notice, and on the most reasonable terms.

He has also a large Hall in Walker's Block, for Dancing, where he will give Instructions to Classes or private persons, in the following Dances: Quadrilles, Contra Dances, Spanish Dances, Reels, Polka Waltz and Polka Reel, Hop Waltz, German Waltz, Waltzes in two, three, four, five and six steps. CITY LAND OFFICE.

A GRAND OPPORTUNITY, WHICH SELDOM OFFERS.

I HAVE FOR SALE, THE DWELLING HOUSE AND TWO LOTS, of A. W. HATCH, Esq., corner of Van Buren and North sts. The property is in the most desirable and valuable in our city. The house is one of convenience. There are arrangements in the house that, you will admit. The house, from the outward appearance, is finished and the inside is brick, and plastered throughout. The cellar is filled with brick, and then lined upon the brick, and then was boarded. Thereby rendering it warm and comfortable through the winter, whereby will take sixty cords to keep others comfortable. There are two parlors and a dining room on the first floor and five or six chambers in second story, together with woodhouse, barn, cistern, well, &c., &c.; and also a yard, filled with fruit trees and shrubbery.

The property is worth, and could have sold at very last summer or fall, for ten or twelve thousand dollars, but it can now be purchased at a great bargain, as I be wanted to sell, and am lucky as to get it. It must and will be sold within the next ten days. A who have any offers to make, call on me and I will tell him the price and terms. jan17 CALEB WALL.

$250 REWARD!

WHEREAS, It is believed that the several fires which occurred on the nights of Tuesday and Wednesday of the present week, which have been so destructive to property, were the work of incendiaries: Now, therefore, I, VIETTE HOLLARS, in such cases as are provided, do hereby offer a reward of TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS, to be paid by said city to any person or persons who shall give such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person concerned in setting fire to any of the said fires, whereby any of the several buildings were destroyed on either of said nights. If more than one person was concerned in causing said fires, said reward is to be paid to the first person of each one who may be convicted thereof, to the exclusion of any person furnishing the information leading to such arrest and conviction.

And furthermore, I hereby in like manner offer a reward of TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS to any person or persons who will give such information as will lead to the arrest and conviction of any person who has set fire of 1854, whereby such house for barn, or other buildings have been destroyed or seriously damaged.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand officially, this 5th day of January, 1855.

SENATE—Hon. John S. Wells, Senator from New Hampshire, appeared, was qualified and took his seat.

Mr. Sumner presented two petitions from the citizens of Delaware, in favor of cheap ocean postage, and two others in favor of the mediation of the U. S. between the belligerent powers of Europe.

Mr. Seward presented the concurrent resolutions of the N. Y. Legislature, in opposition to the extension of the patent of the reaping and threshing machine of McCormick and others.

Mr. Shields from the committee on Military Affairs, reported in placing at the command of the Executive, an adequate force for the suppression of Indian hostilities.

HOUSE.—Mr. PENNINGTON, of New Jersey, presented the resolutions of the Governor and Legislature of New Jersey, asking that an expedition be fitted out to search for Dr. Kane. Referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. Chandler asked the unanimous consent of the House to take from the table the Senate resolution for the purpose that if anything is to be done, it must be done quickly. It would take five minutes to act on it.

Mr. Smith objected.

The Pacific Railroad bill was then taken up—The question was on its passage.

Mr. Campbell, moved the reconsideration of the vote by which the main question was ordered, his object being to

CHEAP BOOKS.
EXTRAORDINARY INDUCEMENTS TO
The Reading Public.
Either of the following five works will be sent free of postage, on receipt of the price annexed.

The Abduction Trials, and Adventures of Fayneta Mandeville,
Wife of Augustus H. Mandeville, of Baltimore, who was stolen from her residence in Boston, New Orleans, by a band of Spanish Robbers, and by them detained in their mountain fastnesses for thirteen months, there having gone through the most terrible scenes that the imagination can picture; the whole, forming the most truly wonderful narrative of actual occurrences ever yet placed before the reading community. Written by her Husband.—Price 12½ cents.

A THRILLING AND STARTLING WORK!
The Authentic Confessions of William Masterson,
The Great Murderer of his Father and Mother! Together with a complete account of his various Robberies and Murders, including that of Wm. Manning, of Bangor, N. Y., and the mountain Miss Jemima Martin. Added to which is also a history of the most daring Spanish Murderer and expert Burglar and Pickpocket, Thomas Linde, the accomplice of Masterson. Price 12½ cents.

The Beautiful Jewess, Rachel Mendoza.
Her lamentable connection with the dark and eventful career of Charles Bonners, otherwise called "Prince Charles," by George Lippard. The interesting portion of whose adventures in Madrid, near the Palace of the Queen, has created so much comment, and such intense interest in the American press.

Throughout the United States are familiar with portions of the career of "Prince Charles," but this narrative sets out in plain colors his whole career, especially developing his connection with the fated Rachel Mendoza, who only a year mingled in the first circles of New York. After relating his adventures in the Naked States, this narrative completes it to Black Ball, to the Royal Court of Spain, proceeding to the storm of the life of Queen Isabella. Price 12½ cents.

STARTLING DISCLOSURES! MYSTERIES SOLVED!
ON THE HISTORY OF ESTHER LIVINGSTONE,
And dark career of Henry Baldwin. By George Lippard. This narrative not only presents a singular career of Esther Livingstone, of Saint Louis, and Henry Baldwin, but the names in which they were actors in the Monmouth Case, are related by the wretched Baldwin, in a bold, truthful, and startling manner, on the murder of Miss Amelia Hanly, in Charleston, on the night of her marriage. In these pages terribly explained. Price 12½ cts.

The Rival's Revenge! or The Lovely Quakeress,
CATHARINE MIDDLETON,
The Skillful Gamester in Disguise. Her singular career with the startling developments in the life of Don senor Jacinto, "The Maniac Priest." Price 12½ cents.

TERMS.—The above Five Thrilling and Interesting Volumes will be sent to any address in the United States and Canada free of postage, on the receipt of 60 cents—Postmasters or others, remitting two dollars, the above five books will be sent to five persons, free of postage; or on the receipt of five dollars they will be sent to fifteen persons. Larger clubs in the same proportion.

All letters must be addressed to
